105th CONGRESS

1997 FINAL HOUSE VOTING RECORD

1997 Final House Vote Descriptions

1. Comp Time — Having failed in the 104th Congress, anti-worker lawmakers aimed their guns at working families again with the first bill of the 105th. H.R. 1 would allow employers to pay workers in compensatory time off instead of cash for overtime hours. While it called for voluntary agreements between employees and employers, employers held the upper hand, and penalties for violating the voluntary provisions were toothless. Additionally, many working families count on overtime to balance the family budget. The bill passed March 19 by a 222-210 vote. Y=W, N=R (DEM: 13-191; REP: 209-18)

2. Budget Reconciliation/Spending — Budget reconciliation legislation combines federal spending priorities for a fiscal year and any changes in tax laws. Opposed by the AFL-CIO, the spending portion (H.R. 2015) of the House reconciliation package allowed for privatization of federal and state welfare programs, denied workfare workers most labor law protections, allowed some Medicaid funding to be awarded to states as block grants with no federal guidelines and made changes in unemployment law that would deny unemployment benefits to hundreds of thousands of eligible jobless workers. H.R. 2015 passed June 26 by a 270-162 vote. Y=W, N=R (DEM: 51-154; REP: 219-7)

3. Budget Reconciliation/Taxes — The Republican-crafted tax portion of reconciliation (H.R. 2014) was a gift to the wealthy but contained only token tax relief for the middle class and working poor. While a $500 child care tax credit would be available to families earning up to $110,000, it was unavailable to a family of four earning $20,000 or less. The bill also contained a capital gains tax cut, reduced the estate taxes on wealthy individuals and reduced the alternative minimum tax on corporations and the rich. Overall, the wealthiest 1 percent of taxpayers would get a $27,155 tax cut, while in virtually every case working poor families would receive nothing. In addition, the legislation contained a provision reclassifying millions of employees as independent contractors, depriving them of health and pension benefits, overtime and even requiring them to pay the employers' share of Social Security and Medicare. The bill passed June 26 by a 253-179 vote. Y=W, N=R (DEM: 27-177; REP: 226-1)

4. Worker Protections — The Employment Standards Administration is the government agency that investigates and enforces labor laws such as the minimum wage and child labor, the Davis-Bacon, Service Contract and Family and Medical Leave acts and anti-sweatshop regulations. But when the FY 1998 Labor/Health and Human Services spending bill (H.R. 2264) was being considered, an amendment to slash $4.3 million from the ESA was introduced. The amendment was defeated Sept. 5 by a 167-260 vote. Y=W, N=R (DEM: 3-200; REP: 164-59).

5. National Labor Relations Board — The NLRB has been a favorite target of anti-worker lawmakers and their corporate allies who spend millions to squash organizing efforts by their workers. Budget cuts have resulted in an 11 percent decrease in NLRB staffing since 1992, yet the case load has risen tremendously, resulting in investigation backlogs and delays in enforcing board decisions because of the shortage of attorneys to handle the cases. An amendment was offered to the FY 1998 Labor/Health and Human Services appropriations bill to cut the NLRB's funding by another 15 percent. The amendment failed Sept. 10 by a 170-253 vote. Y=W, N=R (DEM: 6-194; REP: 164-58.)

6. Davis-Bacon Act — In another swipe at working families, Congress took aim at construction workers' paychecks in the District of Columbia with a provision in the FY 1998 D.C. spending bill to waive the Davis-Bacon Act for school construction and repair. The act ensures that workers on federal and federally funded construction projects (such as D.C. schools) receive the local prevailing wage. This prevents contractors from slashing wages in order to win contracts with low-ball bids and shoddy construction, which could put children's safety at risk. An amendment to strike the anti-Davis-Bacon provision was introduced and it passed Oct. 9 by a 234-188 vote. Y=R, N=W (DEM: 195-5; REP: 38-183)

7. Rail Worker Protections — Rail unions and Amtrak had been engaged in sometimes heated disputes over various labor reform and worker protections spelled out in laws governing Amtrak. One of the major issues was proposed changes in severance and contracting practices. An amendment to the FY 1998 Amtrak reauthorization bill (H.R. 2247) made changes in the law to bring the issues to the bargaining table and also ensured a fair and balanced process. In an effort to derail the measure, a substitute to the bill was offered that would have blocked rail unions and Amtrak from negotiating over the labor reform issues. The substitute, opposed by the AFL-CIO and rail unions, was defeated Oct. 24 by a 195-223 vote. Y=W, N=R (DEM: 5-196; REP: 190-26)

8. Education — H.R. 2646 would have opened the floodgates to privatizing education and stripped scarce resources from the nation's public schools. The AFL-CIO and the Teachers have fought hard to improve the quality of public education, to raise standards and improve student achievement. But school vouchers would drain funds from public education, enrich exclusive private schools and place children remaining in public schools at a disadvantage. The anti-public school bill was defeated Nov. 4 by a 191-228 vote. Y=W, N=R (DEM: 4-192; REP: 187-35)

*FAST TRACK****

Fast Track legislation was scheduled for a vote in the House November 10. But earlier that fall, the AFL-CIO and affiliate unions launched a massive drive against the Fast Track trade scheme that generated 800,000 phone calls, three-quarters of a million post cards and hundreds of rallies. When it became clear to GOP leaders that there were not enough votes to pass Fast Track, the legislation was pulled from the floor. However, most representatives had made commitments on the issue and those are included in this Voting Record.

AFL-CIO

105th CONGRESS

1997 FINAL SENATE VOTING RECORD

Prepared by:
AFL-CIO Legislation Department
Peggy Taylor, Director

1997 Final Senate Vote Descriptions

1. Balanced Budget Constitutional Amendment — Today, a booming stock market--from which many working families are shut out--and painful budget cuts in welfare and other federal programs that help poor and working families have combined to balance the federal budget. If the boom turns into a bust and federal revenue plummets, Congress and the president will have many options to fight a recession. That wouldn't be true if an amendment to the U.S. Constitution requiring a balanced budget had become law. The AFL-CIO opposed S.J. Res. 1 because if a recession occurs, the amendment's terms would require cuts in vital worker safety net programs such as unemployment insurance, food stamps and even Social Security and Medicare in order to balance the budget. It could also mean an increase in state and local taxes because those jurisdictions would be forced to make up for lost federal help to maintain vital programs. The balanced budget amendment failed March 4 by a 66-34 vote (a two-thirds majority was needed). Y=W, N=R (DEM: 11-34; REP: 55-0)

2. Comp Time and 40-Hour Week — At the start of the 105th Congress, anti-worker lawmakers renewed their attack on working families again with one of the first bills of the session. S. 4 would allow employers to pay workers in compensatory time off instead of cash for overtime hours. While the bill called for voluntary agreements between employees and employers, employers held the upper hand and penalties for violating the voluntary provisions were toothless. Additionally, many working families count on overtime to balance the family budget. The bill also allotted an 80-hour work period before any worker could earn overtime, established a program that allowed employers to provide only one hour off for each hour of overtime instead of an hour and a half and even allowed bosses to dock the pay of salaried workers for taking time off during the day for things such as dental and doctor's appointments. Worker-friendly lawmakers staged a filibuster against the bill and defeated a cloture motion that would have killed the filibuster June 4 by a 51-47 vote (60 votes are needed for cloture). Y=W, N=R (DEM: 0-44; REP: 51-3)

3. Medicare/Eligibility Age — The budget reconciliation bill (S. 947) called for raising the eligibility age for Medicare from 65 to 67. Such a move would dramatically increase the number of older Americans without health insurance, including many older workers whose employers have reduced or eliminated health care coverage. It would hike the cost of retiree health care coverage and employers would shift more costs to their retirees or drop coverage altogether. The AFL-CIO backed a procedural rule that would have stripped the Medicare language from the bill, but on June 24 the Senate voted 62-38 to waive that rule. Y=W, N=R (DEM: 12-33; REP: 50-5)

4. Medicare/Means Testing — A provision in the budget reconciliation bill called for means testing on Medicare deductibles. That would penalize the sick and elderly and raise little money. An amendment to eliminate means testing was offered, but the Senate voted to table, or kill, the amendment June 24 by a 70-30 vote. Y=W, N=R (DEM: 21-24; REP: 49-6)

5. Tax Cuts for the Wealthy — The Senate's tax reconciliation bill (H.R. 2015--it carried the House bill number) contained big tax breaks for wealthy individuals and corporations--such as capital gains and estate tax reductions--but few meaningful reductions for working families. The Senate passed the bill June 27 by an 80-18 vote. Y=W, N=R (DEM: 29-14; REP: 51-4)

6. Education — While school vouchers might allow a privileged few access to quality education, they would undermine the public education system that is designed to aid all children. Public education must be improved and the AFL-CIO and the Teachers have fought hard to raise standards and improve student achievement. But school vouchers would drain funds from public education and stymie efforts to make public schools better. The Senate staged a filibuster over an amendment to the FY 1998 District of Columbia appropriations bill calling for a school voucher system in the nation's capital. A cloture motion to end the filibuster was defeated 58-41 (60 votes were needed) Sept. 30. Y=W, N=R (DEM: 4-40; REP: 54-1)

7. Fast Track — One of the biggest AFL-CIO grassroots campaigns ever helped derail Fast Track trade legislation last year. Hundreds of rallies around the nation, 800,000 phone calls and 750,000 postcards let Congress know trade deals must include tough worker and environmental protections. While S. 1269 had sanctions for nations that violate property rights, human and work rights were not protected. Under Fast Track, Congress couldn't vote to improve a trade treaty, just to approve or disapprove the entire deal. Fast Track was heavily backed by business with $5.5 million in television and radio ads in 104 congressional districts. But in the Senate, Fast Track opponents staged a filibuster against a motion to bring the bill to floor. However, the Senate voted to kill the filibuster 69-31 on Nov. 4. Y=W, N=R (DEM: 26-19; REP: 43-12)
